

David McMichen, Director of Safety and Health for Georgia Power

Georgia Power has embarked on a safety cultural transition during the past year. The transition includes a move away from a zero injury mentality to a Safety Excellence philosophy. One of the key components has been a shift away from safety discipline associated with mistakes and human error. The underlying driver has been a Human Performance approach and the use of more HP tools, concepts and methods. Come hear how this transition is transforming the safety culture at Georgia Power as they seek to truly make safety human again.

